

The American Board of Laser Surgery Privacy Policy

The A.B.L.S. will not share information about any member, including that maintained on file relative to his/her certification process, with other members of the A.B.L.S. or persons outside of the organization, without that member's consent, except as noted herein. The A.B.L.S. will not sell or make available its members' information for any commercial purposes. The A.B.L.S. reserves the right to provide information about any individual candidate for certification to either a Board Officer and / or a Diplomate-Examiner for the purpose of reviewing that candidate's application for certification and / or information necessary for evaluation of that candidate for certification. The A.B.L.S. also reserves the right to maintain a list of its members on its web site that will include name, medical designation (M.D., D.O., etc.) at the time of certification, and the certificate number. Should the A.B.L.S. develop a more extensive member's area on its website, members will only opt-in by consent. If the A.B.L.S. is asked by an outside source if a physician does hold the A.B.L.S. certificate, the A.B.L.S. will confirm if it is so, the specialty designated, the certificate number, and year of certification. For further questions, please email us at lasers1060@aol.com.

A.B.L.S. Disclaimer of Liability

The A.B.L.S. will make no guarantees for, nor assume any liability for, the actions of any members in their practice of medicine as the result of earning the A.B.L.S. certificate. The certificate is awarded to medical practitioners who have passed the A.B.L.S.'s written and oral examinations. These examinations are designed to solely promote the understanding of basic laser science and safety in medicine, however the board makes no guarantee of efficacy of any mode of practice or procedure on the part of its members. The certificate itself also does not guarantee the efficacy nor safe practice of any medical practitioners in the use of lasers. These practitioners are not in any way under the ongoing supervision of the board. Their use of any knowledge gained from the A.B.L.S. certification process in their treatment of their patients is entirely within the control of those medical practitioners and not the A.B.L.S.

Guidelines for Use of the A.B.L.S. Name and Logo

The A.B.L.S. defines marketing by physicians as any form of communication (printed or broadcast media, and on websites and the Internet) that is designed to inform or attract patients, or prospective patients, about the availability of products or services. The A.B.L.S. always encourages marketing in a truthful manner that complies with any and all applicable regulations, and professional guidelines, for marketing / advertising by physicians. The following are the guidelines and terms of use of the A.B.L.S. name and logo. Any diplomates of the Board who do not adhere to these may be subject to review and sanctions by the Board of Directors.

- All diplomates may refer to their certification by the A.B.L.S. in their communications and marketing in a professional manner, as they would typically be required to refer to certifications by other medical specialty boards, or memberships in other medical societies. The name may be referred to as the "A.B.L.S."; the "ABLS"; or "The American Board of Laser Surgery" (with or without a "the"). The status may be referred to or conveyed as "certified by", "certificate holder of", "diplomate of", "member of", or other similar designation that accurately conveys the proper status as a bonafide diplomate of the Board.
- The Logo is not available for general use, either as shown on our letterhead, website or other communications / materials, without the express written permission of the Board.
- All advertising and promotional activities by A.B.L.S. diplomates, in conjunction with mention of their A.B.L.S. certification, must be both ethical and in accordance with generally accepted professional guidelines, and not misrepresent the integrity of the A.B.L.S. or its certification process.